

MEDRICK
BENDELROOT

DM
QUICK SHEET

Level 3 Lightfoot Halfling Rogue (Arcane Trickster)

"If the gods wanted me to stop asking questions, they should have made the answers less suspicious."

PLAYER Dan		BACKGROUND Charlatan		ALIGNMENT True Neutral		XP 972
AGE In his 70s		SIZE / HEIGHT Small / 3 ft 4 in		SPEED 25 ft		RULES Legacy 2014 5e*
STR 8 (-1)	DEX 17 (+3)	CON 14 (+2)	INT 14 (+2)		WIS 12 (+1)		CHA 10 (+0)
ARMOR CLASS 15 Studded leather		MAX HP 24 Current: _____		INITIATIVE +3 Dexterity		PROF. BONUS +2 Level 3		PASSIVE PERCEPTION 13 Insight 11 / Invest. 14

Attacks and Damage

ATTACK	TO HIT	DAMAGE	RANGE / PROPERTY	SNEAK ATTACK
Shortbow	+5	1d6 + 3 piercing	80 / 320 ft; two-handed	Add 2d6 once per turn when eligible
Rapier	+5	1d8 + 3 piercing	Melee; finesse	Add 2d6 once per turn when eligible
Dagger (2)	+5	1d4 + 3 piercing	Melee or 20 / 60 ft; finesse, light, thrown	Add 2d6 once per turn when eligible

TURN PLAN

1. Bonus Action: Hide (often with cloak advantage).
2. Action: Shortbow attack at +5.
3. On a qualifying hit, add 2d6 Sneak Attack.
If cornered: rapier, then Bonus Action Disengage.

KEY RESOURCES

Spell slots: [] []
Hit Dice: [] [] [] (d8)
Death Saves: Success [] [] [] Failure [] [] []
Inspiration: [] Attunement: Cloak (1 of 3)

Cloak of Elvenkind - Attuned

Hood up: Advantage on Stealth checks made to hide; observers have disadvantage on Perception checks made to see Medrick.
Action: Raise or lower the hood. It does not grant invisibility or silence.

*Final ability scores and selected equipment are treated as DM-approved for this rule-of-cool one-shot.

STATISTICS AND SKILLS Complete numerical reference

Saving Throws and Senses

SAVE	BONUS	PROFICIENCY
Strength	-1	-
Dexterity	+5	Yes
Constitution	+2	-
Intelligence	+4	Yes
Wisdom	+1	-
Charisma	+0	-

Senses

Passive Perception: 13

Passive Investigation: 14

Passive Insight: 11

Vision: Normal vision; Lightfoot Halflings do not have darkvision in the legacy 2014 rules.

All Skills

SKILL	ABILITY	BONUS	TRAINING
Acrobatics	DEX	+5	Proficient
Animal Handling	WIS	+1	-
Arcana	INT	+2	-
Athletics	STR	-1	-
Deception	CHA	+2	Proficient
History	INT	+2	-
Insight	WIS	+1	-
Intimidation	CHA	+0	-
Investigation	INT	+4	Proficient
Medicine	WIS	+1	-
Nature	INT	+2	-
Perception	WIS	+3	Proficient
Performance	CHA	+0	-
Persuasion	CHA	+0	-
Religion	INT	+2	-
Sleight of Hand	DEX	+5	Proficient
Stealth	DEX	+7	Expertise
Survival	WIS	+1	-

PROFICIENCIES AND CLASS FEATURES What Medrick can do

Proficiencies

CATEGORY	DETAILS
Armor	Light armor
Weapons	Simple weapons, hand crossbows, longswords, rapiers, shortswords
Tools	Thieves' tools (Expertise; usually +7 on Dexterity-based checks), disguise kit, forgery kit
Languages	Common, Halfling, Thieves' Cant

Lightfoot Halfling Traits

Lucky. When Medrick rolls a natural 1 on an attack roll, ability check, or saving throw, reroll the die and use the new result.

Brave. Advantage on saving throws against being frightened.

Halfling Nimbleness. He can move through the space of any creature larger than he is.

Naturally Stealthy. He can attempt to hide when obscured only by a creature at least one size larger than he is.

Rogue Features

Expertise. Double proficiency applies to Stealth and thieves' tools.

Sneak Attack (2d6). Once per turn, add 2d6 damage on a hit with a finesse or ranged weapon when Medrick has advantage, or when a non-incapacitated ally is within 5 feet of the target and Medrick does not have disadvantage. A qualifying reaction attack on another creature's turn can use Sneak Attack again.

Thieves' Cant. He understands the coded jargon, signs, and hidden meanings used by criminals and rogues.

Cunning Action. As a bonus action, Dash, Disengage, or Hide.

Arcane Trickster Feature: Mage Hand Legerdemain

Invisible Accomplice

Invisible hand: Medrick's Mage Hand is invisible.

Remote rogue work: It can stow or retrieve objects from a container worn or carried by another creature, manipulate containers, and use thieves' tools to pick locks or disarm traps at range.

Bonus-action control: He may use the bonus action granted by Cunning Action to control the hand.

Concealment: A Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check contested by the observer's Wisdom (Perception) may conceal what the hand is doing.

Limit: Only one bonus action per turn; he cannot Hide and control the hand during the same turn.

ARCANE TRICKSTER SPELLBOOK Cantrips and spellcasting rules

SPELLCASTING	SAVE DC	ATTACK BONUS	SLOTS	KNOWN
Intelligence	12	+4	2 first-level	3 cantrips / 3 spells

Spell Slot Tracker

First-level slots: [] []

Concentration: Only one concentration spell can be active at a time. Silent Image requires concentration.

Cantrip: Mage Hand

CASTING TIME	RANGE	DURATION	COMPONENTS
1 action	30 ft	1 minute	V, S

Creates a spectral hand that can manipulate objects weighing up to 10 pounds. It cannot attack, activate magic items, or carry more than 10 pounds. Arcane Trickster upgrades make it invisible and usable for remote rogue work.

Cantrip: Minor Illusion

CASTING TIME	RANGE	DURATION	COMPONENTS
1 action	30 ft	1 minute	S, M

Creates either a sound or a still image inside a 5-foot cube. Physical interaction reveals an image as false. A creature can use an action to investigate the illusion against spell save DC 12.

Cantrip: Prestidigitation

CASTING TIME	RANGE	DURATION	COMPONENTS
1 action	10 ft	Up to 1 hour	V, S

Produces small harmless magical effects: a sensory flourish, cleaning or soiling, warming or chilling, flavoring, lighting or snuffing a small flame, marking a surface, or creating a tiny temporary trinket. Up to three non-instantaneous effects can coexist.

FIRST-LEVEL SPELLS Known spells and practical limits

Find Familiar

CAST	RANGE	DURATION	COMPONENTS	SCHOOL
1 hour	10 ft	Instantaneous	V, S, M*	Conjuration; ritual tag

Summons a spirit in an animal form; Medrick uses an owl. The familiar acts independently, obeys commands, cannot attack, can take other actions, and can scout through a telepathic link within 100 feet. It can also deliver touch spells.

*The spell consumes 10 gp of charcoal, incense, and herbs in a brass brazier. Arcane Trickster does not automatically gain wizard Ritual Casting, so casting it normally uses one spell slot. For this one-shot, the owl is assumed to begin already summoned with DM approval.

Disguise Self

CAST	RANGE	DURATION	COMPONENTS	SCHOOL
1 action	Self	1 hour	V, S	Illusion; no concentration

Changes clothing, armor, weapons, and visible physical appearance within the spell's size limits. It is visual only; touch can reveal the deception. A suspicious creature can use an action to investigate against DC 12.

Silent Image

CAST	RANGE	DURATION	COMPONENTS	SCHOOL
1 action	60 ft	Concentration, up to 10 min	V, S, M	Illusion

Creates a visual image no larger than a 15-foot cube. Medrick can use an action to move it. It makes no sound, smell, heat, or texture. Physical interaction reveals it; investigation against DC 12 can identify the illusion.

Rule-of-Cool Illusion Prompts

- Minor Illusion: a voice behind a door, footsteps moving away, a small false object, or a visual distraction.
- Silent Image: a fake wall, guard, monster, pit, smoke bank, blocked corridor, or other visual obstacle.
- Disguise Self: combine a new appearance with forged papers, an established false identity, and confident behavior.
- Mage Hand: lift keys, work a latch, plant evidence, retrieve a small object, or perform thieves' tools work from 30 feet away.

MAGIC ITEM AND OWL FAMILIAR Special item and companion stat block

Cloak of Elvenkind

CATEGORY	Wondrous item, uncommon; requires attunement
ATTUNEMENT	Yes - Medrick is attuned (1 of 3 possible items)
HOOD UP	Advantage on Dexterity (Stealth) checks made to hide. Creatures have disadvantage on Wisdom (Perception) checks made to see him.
HOOD ACTION	Raising or lowering the hood uses an action. The cloak blends with surroundings but does not make him invisible or silent.

Owl Familiar - Statistics

AC	HP	SPEED	INIT.	PASSIVE PERCEPTION	DARKVISION
11	1 (1d4 - 1)	5 ft; fly 60 ft	+1	13	120 ft
STR	DEX	CON	INT	WIS	CHA
3 (-4)	13 (+1)	8 (-1)	2 (-4)	12 (+1)	7 (-2)

Owl Traits and Use

Skills. Perception +3, Stealth +3.

Flyby. The owl does not provoke opportunity attacks when it flies out of an enemy's reach.

Keen Hearing and Sight. Advantage on Wisdom (Perception) checks relying on hearing or sight.

Familiar limits. It cannot attack. It can take Help, Dash, Disengage, Dodge, Hide, Ready, Search, and Use an Object when appropriate. It rolls its own initiative and can be dismissed to a pocket dimension.

Common combat use. The owl flies within 5 feet of a target, takes the Help action to aid Medrick's next attack, then uses Flyby to leave without provoking. The DM can still target it; it has only 1 HP.

Familiar Table Reminder

Help timing: The Help action benefits the next qualifying ally attack before the owl's next turn.

Fragility: The owl is a tactical resource, not a permanent source of free advantage. Enemies may react to repeated interference.

INVENTORY, PACK AND WEALTH

Tracked equipment and coin

Weapons, Armor and Adventuring Gear

ITEM	QTY.	NOTES
Studded leather armor	1	AC 12 + Dexterity modifier = 15
Cloak of Elvenkind	1	Attuned; special item
Rapier	1	Finesse melee weapon
Shortbow	1	Primary ranged weapon
Arrows	20	Carried in quiver
Daggers	2	Melee or thrown 20 / 60 ft
Thieves' tools	1 set	Expertise; usually +7 with Dexterity
Disguise kit	1	Carried; proficient
Forgery kit	1	Carried; proficient; DM-approved additional kit
Fine clothes	1 set	Charlatan background
Marked cards	1 deck	Tool of the con
Loaded dice	1 set	Tool of the con
Fake signet ring	1	Supports false identity and scams
Forged documents	Assorted	False identity papers
Cosmetics / disguise supplies	1 pouch	Portable disguise materials
Flask of "medicinal" mead	1	Personal comfort and bad influence

Burglar's Pack

Backpack		Bag of 1,000 ball bearings	10 ft string		Bell
5 candles		Crowbar	Hammer		10 pitons
Hooded lantern		2 flasks oil	5 days rations		Tinderbox
Waterskin		50 ft hempen rope
CP	SP	EP	GP	PP	CARRYING CAPACITY
0	0	0	15*	0	120 lb (Strength 8 x 15)

*15 gp is the approved Charlatan starting coin. A DM deducting the initial Find Familiar material cost may instead begin Medrick with 5 gp.

BACKGROUND AND ROLEPLAYING Charlatan identity, appearance and personality

Charlatan Background

Skill proficiencies. Deception and Sleight of Hand.

Tool proficiencies. Disguise kit and forgery kit.

Feature - False Identity. Medrick has developed a complete second identity, including documents, established acquaintances, and disguises that let him assume that persona.

Preferred con. He presents himself as harmless, mildly official, and just competent enough that people would rather cooperate than ask questions.

False Identity - Merrick Barleybrook

Occupation: Traveling cellar assessor, merchant's clerk, and occasional quality inspector for inns and breweries.

Presentation: Neat clothes, patient smile, forged credentials, a fake signet ring, and the air of someone performing a boring but legitimate inspection.

Why it works: It explains his interest in locks, storage rooms, inventories, ledgers, and ceremonial drink without making him look dangerous.

Status: DM-ready suggestion; the name or occupation can change without affecting the build.

Appearance and Manner

Hair	Soft blonde to dirty-blonde
Eyes	Deep blue with lighter baby-blue tones
Skin	Pale porcelain with rosy undertones
Build	Small, quick, soft-featured, and almost offensively adorable
Dress	Neat practical clothing beneath the Cloak of Elvenkind; hood usually down
First impression	Sweet, approachable, harmless, and easy to underestimate
Actual manner	Observant, dryly funny, evasive when pressed, and protective once he chooses people as his own

Personality

Traits. Appears sweet and harmless. Loves a clever scam that does not hurt innocent people. Becomes surprisingly hilarious once relaxed or drinking. Protective of friends.

Ideal. "Nobody gets to decide what is true for someone else."

Bond. Despite everything, he still cares about the family he left behind.

Flaw. He cannot resist exposing hypocrisy, even when keeping his mouth shut would be smarter.

Worldview. He is not hostile to community, tradition, or pleasure. He is hostile to authority that demands belief without tolerating questions.

FULL BACKSTORY Part I - The sixth of eleven

Medrick Bendelroot was born the sixth child in a family of eleven: exactly in the middle. He was not the oldest, who carried expectations, and not the youngest, who drew affection. In a home and commune overflowing with children, he learned early how to move unnoticed, listen carefully, and make himself entertaining when he wanted to be seen. Being overlooked was not always a disadvantage. Sometimes it was freedom.

The Bendelroots lived in a secluded halfling commune devoted to the Hearthkeeper, a deity of fellowship, abundance, humble work, and the sacred comfort of a well-tended home. Outsiders might have described the place as peaceful, traditional, and unusually fond of communal meals. Medrick eventually settled on a simpler description: it was a cult.

To be fair, it was a remarkably laid-back cult. The commune brewed excellent mead. Music filled most evenings. Festivals marked the seasons. Work was shared, nobody went hungry, doors remained unlocked, and children were raised among an enormous network of relatives and neighbors. Medrick genuinely loved parts of it. He loved the songs, the meals, the warm kitchens, the stories told around crowded tables, and the feeling that someone would always make room for one more chair.

But the comfort came with conditions. The elders always knew best. The Hearthkeeper always provided. Doubt was temptation. Questions were disrespect. A peaceful life was available to anyone willing to accept the elders' explanation for everything and to stop noticing how often those explanations benefited the elders.

Medrick noticed. He saw the leaders drink from the best casks while preaching humility. He watched families make sacrifices they could barely afford while senior members of the commune lived comfortably. He noticed that miracles and divine warnings appeared with suspicious regularity whenever donations declined or someone challenged a rule. The older he became, the less interested he was in pretending the contradictions were holy mysteries.

He was not an angry child so much as an inconvenient one. He asked why. Then he asked why again. When the answer changed, he remembered the first version. When told that faith required trust, he asked why trust only seemed to flow upward. He stole ceremonial mead more than once, partly because it was excellent and partly because nothing made the elders more ridiculous than the sight of them protecting a barrel as though the fate of creation depended on it.

The elders saw intelligence, confidence, and charisma in him, even if his charm did not always appear in conventional ways. They offered him a path back toward respectability: clerical training. As a cleric of the Hearthkeeper, Medrick could learn doctrine, serve the community, and eventually help guide future generations. In practical terms, they offered him a place inside the system he had spent years mocking.

Medrick's first refusal was polite. The second was clearer. By the time the offer became an ultimatum, his answer was essentially: absolutely not. He did not want divine authority, ceremonial robes, or a lifetime spent repeating claims he did not believe. More importantly, he did not want to become the kind of person who punished younger versions of himself for asking obvious questions.

Family Position

Birth order: Sixth of eleven children - the exact middle child.

Current relationship: Still in occasional contact with family, but not emotionally close and not interested in returning permanently.

Emotional truth: He misses people, food, songs, and communal warmth more than he misses the faith or authority structure.

FULL BACKSTORY Part II - The Festival of First Harvest

The final break came during the Festival of First Harvest. The elders had reserved several casks of ceremonial mead for their private rites, describing it as specially blessed and unsuitable for ordinary members of the commune. Medrick decided to test the claim.

Using borrowed keys, forged inventory marks, a disguise, and a needlessly elaborate sequence of swapped labels and hidden barrels, he removed the ceremonial mead from the elders' stores. He did not drink it alone. Instead, he quietly distributed it throughout the commune's public feast and replaced the sacred casks with ordinary mead from the common cellar.

When the elders discovered the apparent theft, they stopped the celebration and demanded that the guilty person confess. Medrick did. Then he asked which cups contained the blessed mead and which contained the ordinary batch. Nobody could tell. The elders insisted that the difference was spiritual rather than sensory. Medrick pointed out that they had been praising the taste of the replacement casks for most of the evening.

The question spread through the feast faster than the alcohol. If the blessing was real, why could the clergy not recognize it? If the common mead was good enough for sacred rites, why had the best drink been reserved for the elders? If the distinction existed only because authority declared it, what else in the commune worked the same way? Some people called Medrick's stunt theft and blasphemy. Others called it the first honest conversation they had heard in years.

Officially, Medrick was charged with theft, deception, sacrilege, disruption of a holy festival, misuse of communal property, impersonation of a cellar steward, and encouraging disrespect toward the clergy. The list was long enough that he was secretly proud of it.

The elders offered him one final choice. He could apologize publicly, accept clerical training, and submit to a period of religious correction - or he could leave the commune. Medrick began packing before they finished describing the apology.

Leaving felt less like exile than release. He had known for years that the commune's certainty was built on performance, selective memory, and the expectation that decent people would remain quiet to preserve the peace. He was glad to be free of it. Still, freedom was less glamorous than he had imagined. It involved hunger, bad weather, suspicious guards, unreliable employers, and the discovery that most towns charged considerably more for mead than his family had.

Official Reason for Expulsion

Charges: Theft, deception, sacrilege, disruption, impersonation, misuse of communal property, and encouraging disrespect toward the clergy.

Real reason: He publicly proved that the elders' authority depended on everyone agreeing not to question it.

FULL BACKSTORY Part III - Free, adaptable, and not especially successful

Over the following decades, Medrick survived as a scout, courier, locksmith, guide, investigator, performer, con artist, and occasional adventurer. He moved in and out of parties as opportunities appeared. Some groups were competent, some were disasters, and most lasted only until the money ran out or personalities became unbearable. He never became famous, outrageously wealthy, or notably successful. He became adaptable.

He learned enough wizardry to make his old tricks more convincing. A spectral hand could reach where his fingers could not. A minor illusion could turn one lie into three. A borrowed face and the correct piece of paper could open doors that lockpicks could not. He discovered that looking adorable was not merely an accident of birth; it was a professional advantage.

Medrick has never entirely cut off his family. Letters arrive irregularly. He replies even less reliably. He has visited the commune a handful of times, usually for a wedding, illness, funeral, or sibling who specifically asked him to come. His parents disapprove of his wandering life but are relieved that he is alive. Some siblings quietly admire him. Others think he caused unnecessary pain. Most relationships remain affectionate at a safe distance.

He does not hate the place where he grew up. Hatred would be easier. He misses the music and the lazy evenings, the warmth of too many relatives in one room, and the particular taste of mead made from the commune's hillside flowers. What he refuses to miss is being told that obedience is the same thing as goodness.

Today, Medrick is a liar with a conscience, a thief with standards, and a reluctant hero whenever avoiding heroism becomes more trouble than helping. He protects people he has chosen, distrusts anyone who claims unquestionable authority, and cannot resist pulling at the loose thread in a respectable person's story. He is still looking for a little security, a little excitement, and perhaps one adventuring party worth staying with longer than usual.

He also remains firmly convinced that ceremonial mead tastes better when stolen.

Current Situation

Lifestyle: A long-term drifter who takes adventuring work to survive rather than to build a legend.

Success level: Experienced and capable, but never outrageously successful or wealthy.

Family contact: Occasional letters and rare visits; real affection at a deliberate distance.

Reason to join a party: Available coin, practical necessity, curiosity, and the faint possibility that this group might be worth staying with.

DM NOTES AND TABLE GUIDE Hooks, tactics and adjudication reminders

Core Character Read

What Medrick Is

A harmless-looking older halfling who survives by being underestimated.

A skeptical former cult member who still values community, comfort, and family - just not compulsory belief.

A middling career adventurer rather than a famous master thief. He is clever, experienced, and usually short on money.

A loner by habit who wants connection more than he readily admits.

Roleplaying Cues

DEFAULT TONE	Polite, observant, lightly amused, and difficult to pin down.
WHEN COMFORTABLE	Dry humor, tavern stories, and increasingly funny after a few drinks.
WHEN THREATENED	Quieter and more evasive rather than louder.
WHEN FRIENDS ARE THREATENED	Protective, decisive, and willing to stop joking.
AUTHORITY TRIGGER	Grand claims, religious certainty, hypocrisy, or demands for unquestioning obedience.
MORAL LINE	Cons and theft are acceptable when aimed at the powerful, corrupt, or deserving; cruelty toward innocents is not.

Combat and Action Economy

Preferred opening. Use the cloak and terrain to Hide as a bonus action, then attack with the shortbow. A successful qualifying hit deals $1d6 + 3 + 2d6$.

Melee exit. Rapier attack, apply Sneak Attack if eligible, then Disengage as a bonus action and move away.

Familiar support. Owl uses Help near the target, then Flyby to retreat. It is useful but fragile: AC 11 and 1 HP.

Bonus-action conflict. Medrick gets only one bonus action. He cannot Hide, Disengage, and control Mage Hand in the same turn.

Sneak Attack timing. Once per turn, not once per round. A qualifying reaction attack on another creature's turn may gain Sneak Attack again.

Stealth limitation. A successful Stealth check does not make him undetectable. He still needs concealment; noise, scent, tracks, or obvious positioning may reveal him.

DM-Ready Story Hooks

A sibling asks for help but refuses to let the elders know.

A former commune member claims the Hearthkeeper has begun speaking directly to the faithful.

An old adventuring companion arrives with a debt, map, or accusation tied to one of Medrick's former identities.

Merrick Barleybrook has somehow acquired obligations, enemies, or a reputation Medrick did not create.

The Cloak of Elvenkind once belonged to someone who wants it back - or recognizes how Medrick obtained it.

Open Details

DETAIL	CURRENT ANSWER
Exact age	Somewhere in his 70s
Names of parents and ten siblings	Not yet established
Cloak provenance	Not yet established
Most recent adventuring party	Not yet established
Immediate one-shot motivation	Practical need, available coin, cautious curiosity; DM may connect directly to the adventure

MEDRICK BENDELROOT - sweet face, suspicious answers, excellent mead.